I am Bruce Johnson, Superintendent of Redwood Christian Schools of Castro Valley and San Lorenzo, California. I have been active with California Crosspoint Middle and High School (formerly Chinese Christian High School) for more than twenty-five years.

It is with great joy and confidence that I address you this evening about California Crosspoint Middle and High School, one of the most outstanding schools – public or private – with which I have been associated in my forty-two years serving at Redwood Christian Schools.

I have worked with schools around the world as a member of the Executive Board of Association of Christian Schools International (24,000 schools around the world), in addition to chairing multiple accreditation teams for the Western Association of Schools and Colleges and the Association of Christian Schools International.

Also serving on the ACSI Executive Board was Robin Hom, the Superintendent of California Crosspoint Middle and High School. Robin is truly an outstanding school administrator. I believe it is important that I point that out as the leadership of any school dictates the policies and procedures of the school. Robin is known internationally as a man of integrity.

The faculty and staff of California Crosspoint Middle and High School are dedicated to providing their students with the finest education available. They understand that they are training the next generation of leaders of our great country, our churches and business.

The students of California Crosspoint Middle and High School are exceptional, not only as students, but also as members of every community where the school has been located. You will not find any disturbance reports from the authorities or complaints from neighbors. These students are simply great young people, who take their academics seriously and are committed to serving others.

Obviously, I am a tremendous fan of California Crosspoint Middle and High School, their superintendent, faculty, staff and students. Combined they will make a tremendous addition to the City of Hayward.

Serving Christ through education,

Bruce D. Johnson
Superintendent
